Sight-seeing

Tianjin and the Foreign Concessions

by Christopher Boobier (博一夫)

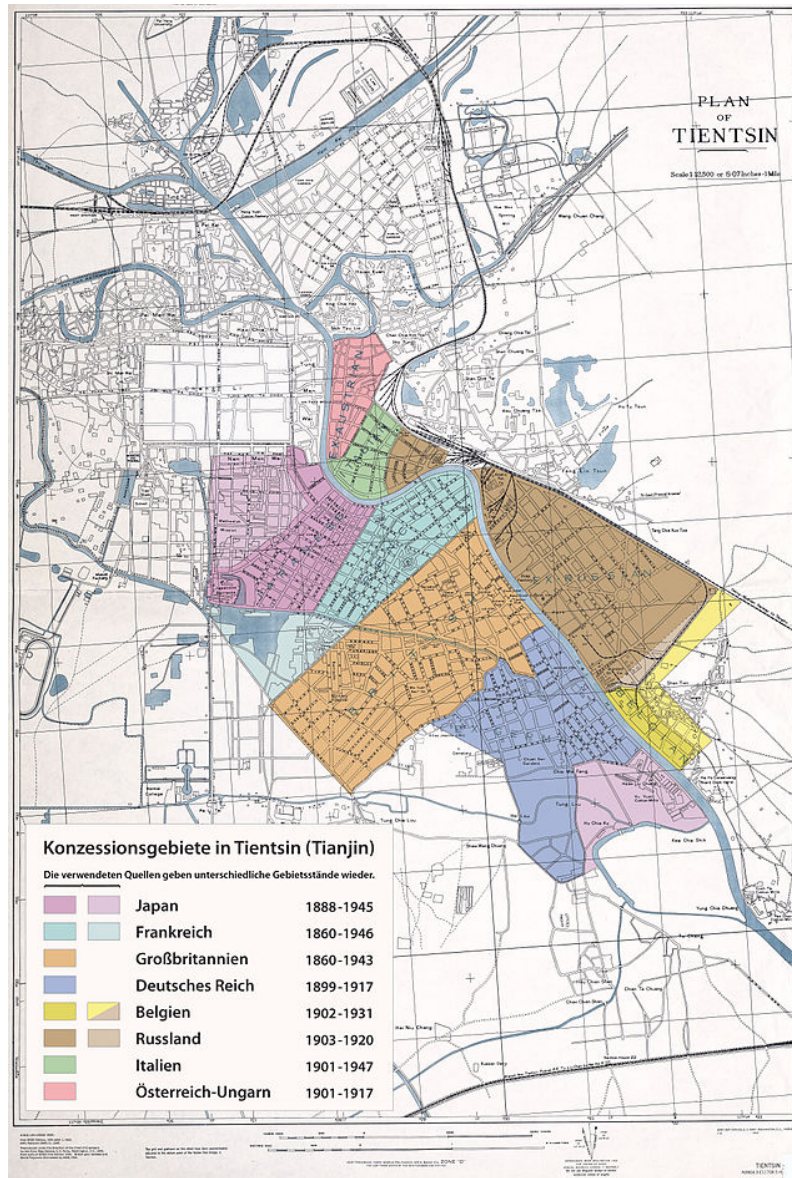

Tianjin is not a stranger to the formation of international communities within her territory. Being ideally placed at the intersection between the Hai He River and the Grand Canal, Tianjin has for a long time been recognised as one of China's most significant trading ports with Beijing and North China.

Following the Peking Convention of 1860, extraterritoriality was granted to both Britain and France, who proceeded to establish their own concession areas. At the turn of the 20th century, Japan, Germany, Russia, Austria-Hungary, Italy and Belgium began to establish their own concession areas, resulting in the majority of the riverfront area of downtown Tianjin being subject to foreign control. This occupation saw the construction of schools, hospitals, transport links, water towers, prisons and barracks, and remained occupied by the foreign merchant and diplomatic population of Tianjin until the outbreak of World War Two. Having survived invasions and earthquakes, these concession areas still stand firm today, offering a fascinating insight into Tianjin's recent past when foreign occupation took a very different form.

Five Boulevards area (Wu Da Dao)

by Christopher Boobier (博一夫)

Located in Heping District, the “Five Avenues” (Wudadao) area represents the former British Concession. The five roads – consisting of Chengdu Dao (成都道), Machang Dao (马场道), Chongqing Dao (重庆道), Munan Dao (睦南道) and Dali Dao (大理道), shape the area which contains a vast array of European architectures and gardens, covering around 1.28 square kilometres.

Former residents have included former Olympic Champion Eric Liddell – a Scotsman who was born in Tianjin in 1902, and was later remembered in the 1981 Oscar-winning film Chariots of Fire, along with a large number of Chinese celebrities.

This area is protected by local authorities, and therefore any revitalization or redevelopment of any properties is performed under strict regulation. A wonderful area for strolling on a Sunday afternoon, Wudadao is increasingly full of modern residences, cool bars, hideaway cafes and up-market restaurants. Horse carriages and bicycle rent are available.

Originally formed in 1901, the former Italian Concession area remains relatively intact and increasingly a hub for European culture and Italian cultural events. Formerly intended as a garrison for Italian troops, the area is now a vibrant location for dining and drinks, and has become a major tourist location for visitors from all across China.

An old map of the former Italian Concession, seen on the banks of the Hai He River.

Marco Polo Square, located in the former Italian Concession, is now home to a foreign language cinema. At the time of writing, this cinema complex is showing an Italian Film Festival containing some of the most widely celebrated classics of Italian motion picture history.

Other Foreign Concessions

The area of Jiefang Lu (解放路) (previously known as Victoria Road), which housed the many custom and diplomatic offices, as well as Victoria Park. A trip to the Astor Hotel or indeed the Ritz Carlton, followed by a walk along Jiefang Lu towards the river allows you to revisit a world of customs officials, elegant ballrooms and regal architecture.

The national park of Mount Panshan is located in Jizhou District, 135km to the North of Tianjin. It is known as "the first mountain to the east of Beijing" and was once ranked as one of the fifteen famous scenic spots in China. The beautiful scenery of the mountain is characterized by its five peaks, eight special rocks and pine tree forest views. Emperor Qianlong of the Qing Dynasty, frequently visited this place and he once said: "Had I known Mount Panshan earlier, I would not have taken the trouble to travel down to the south!" In recent years, a number of ancient buildings were restored and a passenger cableway was added, to encourage tourism.

Running and cycling

by Ellen Montanari

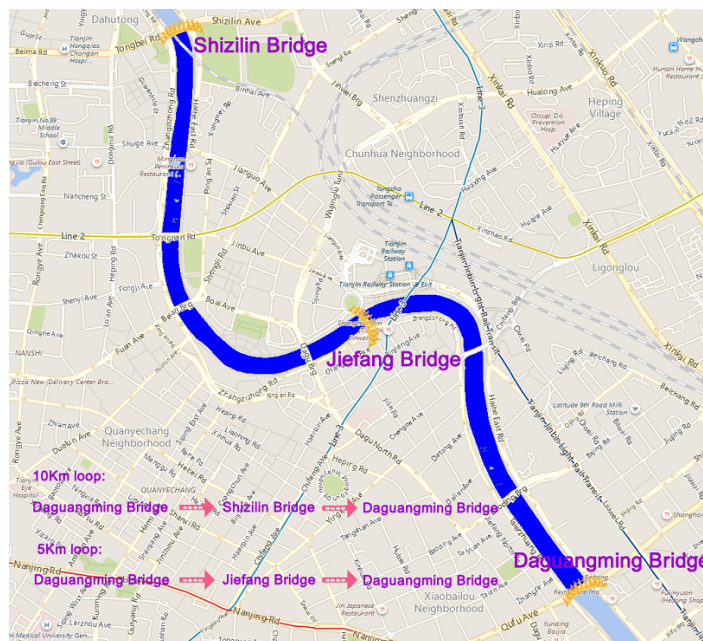

Running

There are several areas to run in Tianjin, depending on where you live. Some people enjoy running around the Water Park while others make use of the 400m track at Minyuan Stadium.

One of the nicest routes however, is along the Haihe river. The promenade along the river is exclusively for pedestrians and provides magnificent views across the city skyline. You can start the running route anywhere along the river and run up or down along one side and cross to the other side on one of the multiple bridges.

A classic 10km loop is starting at the Daguangming bridge (the golden bridge near the Astor hotel), running north along one of the river sides until you reach Shizilin bridge. That's the bridge at the north end of the Ancient Cultural Street, from where you catch a great view on the Tianjin Eye further up the river. Run back along the other side of the Haihe until you reach Daguangming bridge again and your 10km loop is complete.

If you prefer a 5km loop from the same starting point (in front of the Astor hotel), then cross and turn around at the famous Jiefang bridge at the Tianjin train station. Generally speaking, crossing and turning around at the next bridge will add about 2km to the loop.

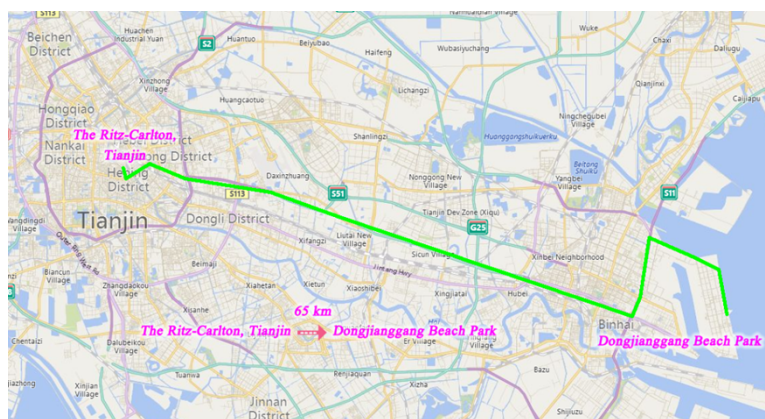

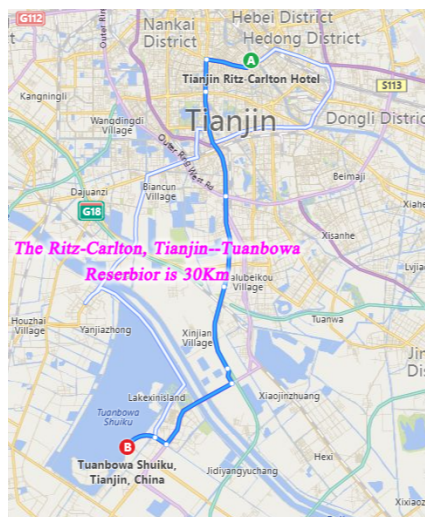

Cycling

There is a small expat cycling group of 5 to 10 cyclists going out for rides generally either on Saturdays or Sundays early morning. The group picks up members along the way as they make their way south towards the Tuanbowa reservoir.

Cycling to the reservoir from the centre of town (Ritz-Carlton hotel) is about 30km. Riding around the reservoir is highly recommended as it is a fairly scenic route along the natural waterfront. One reservoir loop is around 33km. From the Ritz-Carlton hotel to and around the reservoir and back makes for a nice 85km morning ride.

Sometimes the cycling group rides all the way to Binhai and back. While the ride there is not the most scenic, it is still rewarding to reach the ocean. One way is about 65-70km.

There is a very helpful cycling shop at Dazhigu 6th Road (near the Wanda Vista Hotel). The mechanics can help with any bike tuning and bike maintenance issues. They are extremely friendly and also have a strong group of Chinese cyclists you can join for rides.
